

Figure 77. a) The boundary between autochthonous cover beds imbricated above basement, and allochthonous strata on mobilized basement, marks the locus to which the trailing (SW) edge of the autochthonous cover has been thrust northeastward.

b) The cover was stripped from its basement ahead of the allochthonous rocks. As a result of loading by the allochthon, the basement was then mobilized [original figure].